

Lex, a brave 23-year-old, learns to navigate her new job in the small town of Sailsburg after leaving her home in New York. With new relationships and scenery, will she be able to adapt, or will she cave under the pressure of her family to move back to the city from which she came? Alexa Jameson grew up in New York City with her whole family, and the city is all she's ever known. After college, she decided that she wanted a change of scenery, much to her family's dismay. She landed a job with a small yet popular marketing company called Timbers Marketing. Loving what they stood for, she took the chance and left the big city. Her family did everything to try to get her to stay, but she would not budge. Moving into her new apartment, she met her new best friend and neighbor, Sammy. They instantly clicked, and she helped Lex navigate the dynamics of her new home. She meets many new friends who become like family to her, including the small bakery owner, Mrs. Harbor, who is very adamant about introducing her to her grandson, Eli. When they meet, they instantly have a connection, fueled by witty banter and some friendly bullying. With the help of Sammy, Eli, and many others along the way, Lex quickly falls in love with her new home. While her family visits, they try to throw a wrench in her love for the small town, but her new family quickly reminds her why she started to love the town in the first place. With new friends, family, and love, she quickly forgets ever considering returning to the city. While she misses her family, they understand that she needs to make her own path and support her decision to stay.

Lex: 23 years old. She is very passionate about helping small businesses and making her own way in the world. She is tired of being sucked in by her family and is ready to branch out and write her own story outside of the city. She is outgoing, brave, and slightly stubborn. With her new change of scenery, she helps the town highlight what is truly important and make many necessary changes, much to Eli's dismay. Her determination to help put the town on the map rubs some feathers but altogether helps the town thrive.

Eli: 25 years old. He is a strong carpenter who is the grandson of the bakery owner, Mrs. Harbor. He is a stubborn business owner who is a little skeptical of outsiders coming into town. He grew up in the area and has watched the town change over the years. He is afraid of too many outsiders coming into town and changing it completely. As part of the town's board of traditions, he works hard to keep the town's history alive. Meeting Lex opens his eyes to how change can sometimes help history thrive and highlight the truly important things.

Sammy: 23-year-old. She is your classic small-town girl with big dreams. Slightly shy and dorky, Lex helps pull her out of her shell and chase her dreams. She becomes a crucial part of the board, warming up to Lex. With her extensive connections in town, she is able to help integrate Lex into the community rather quickly and make some new connections along the way.
